Released in 2007, the game stars Usami Sato, a teenage girl living in the fictional city of Chateaufort, in the middle of France. As Sato, players are tasked with finding the right combination of import cars to win the races by leading a group of fictional characters. It follows a common gaming concept, where the player can select a character to use in a race. In Hot Import Nights, players can choose from a group of real or fictional racing drivers and compete against other racers in a series of races. Each of the characters that the player can control is associated with one of the game's import cars, which can be modified by the player to produce different performance stats. The game has online multiplayer capability and is supported by a downloadable car editor. Juiced 2: Hot Import Nights was the first game developed by Juice Games. The game was published in Europe by Eutechnyx in February 2007, and was released in North America by EA Games in July 2007.
